Thank you for sharing your concerns about how best to protect our beaches. This issue is of major concern to me having lived on or near the beach for most of my life. I have been working closely with a variety of individuals who have responsibilities for protecting our beaches. In fact, there is a study being completed now which should contain several recommendations as to which approaches may be best for specific areas of beaches. I also serve on the Joint Committee on Intergovernmental Relations and have brought the beach erosion problems to the attention of staff and fellow members. I agree with you that state and local governments must take on the responsibility of protecting our beaches since they are so important to our economy and quality of life.
